

PANAMA MEASURE IS NOT TO BE OPPOSED

SENATE'S AMMENDMENT TO THE MUCH TALKED OF BILL WILL BE ACCEPTED.

TO INCREASE SHIPPING

Progressive Party Makes Its Formal Bow in the Halls of Congress Today.

Washington, Aug. 9.—The senate's amendment to the Panama Canal bill to admit to United States registry American owned foreign built ships engaged in foreign trade only and pass them through the Panama Canal free of tolls in all probability will receive no opposition from the administration. The provision it is said probably would not affect trans-Atlantic or trans-Pacific commerce.

Would Aid Commerce. The right of free passage through the canal however, it is said today however by officials of the department of commerce and labor, would probably bring all the lines engaged in traffic between the countries of the western hemisphere, but flying foreign flags under the stars and stripes.

With a vote on the Panama canal bill and all amendments to it set for five, this afternoon the senate began final consideration of the measure with a renewal of the fight against railroad owned ships. The committee's amendment providing that a railroad owned vessel might pass through the canal provided 50 percent of its cargo was destined to foreign ports, was the chief subject of discussion.

Makes its Bow. The progressive party made its formal bow today in the senate. Senator Poindexter, as a member of the new party asked that Col. Roosevelt's speech at Chicago Aug. 6th be printed as a public document.

Taft's Also. The request followed by Senator Brandegee that Senator Taft's speech of notification and President Taft's speech of acceptance also be printed as a public document.

And Wilson's. Senator Culberson had asked that Senator-elect James' notification speech and Governor Woodrow Wilson's acceptance be printed as another document. All three requests were granted.

Not Platforms. Senator Jones of Washington, then asked the senate to print the platform of the three parties as a document. "I don't want to object interrupted Senator Gallinger, but has Debs been nominated yet?"

Sensor Overman, did object however, and the platforms will not be printed.

Jail Sentences. Senator Kenyon's bills to compel federal courts to impose jail sentences instead of fines upon convicted violators of the Sherman anti-trust law got out of committee today and took a place upon the senate's calendar. Mr. Kenyon will work for its passage at this session.

Makes Appointment. President Taft today formally appointed, without the confirmation of the senate, Luther Conant, Jr., of New York, as commissioner of corporations to succeed Herbert Knox Smith, resigned, to join the progressive party.

Los Angeles, Aug. 9.—With but three witnesses remaining the prosecution in the bribery trial of Clarence S. Darrow expected to conclude its case in rebuttal today. It was generally expected that the prosecution would make another attempt to introduce into evidence the transcript of alleged incriminating conversations between Darrow and John R. Harrington. The trial is now in its 13th week, and both sides apparently are eager to conclude. If the rebels have not retreated across the line when the troops arrive they will probably be arrested. The news came to the state department from the American consul at Nogales today and is regarded as confirmation of the report that the rebel forces rapidly are disintegrating. United States troops are moving to the point where Mexican rebels are reported to be raiding American ranches. Col. E. Z. Steever has dispatched troop G, of the third cavalry from Fort Bliss, the men moving on horse along the border. Col. "All now are safe," said Mr. Smith. "But their homes, crops and other possessions are at the mercy of the revolutionists. I have made no appeal to Orozco or Salazar, though others of our church did, but nothing came of it. I don't think intervention by the United States would be wise and am sure it would lead to a still greater demoralization."

THE ROOSEVELT WAY HELD UP TO SCORN

Senator La Follette Declares Bull Moose Has Always Been Selfish and Unscrupulous in Politics.

Madison, Wis., Aug. 9.—Senator La Follette, describing "the Roosevelt Way," on the cover of his magazine today says:

"How do you stand on ME?" is Roosevelt's sole test of qualification for a Progressive. Imagine a congress elected on this basis. Of course, it would be reactionary. Roosevelt is not concerned about a progressive congress. An Aldrich senate and a Cannon house are satisfactory to him, if he can win more easily with that kind of a combination. What would be kind of the progressive movement under such leadership? And yet, it is exactly the plan Roosevelt pursued when president. It is the Roosevelt way. He supported Lodge for United States senator two years ago, and Penrose for United States senator four years ago. He has always played this kind of a political game."

In an editorial on "Roosevelt Tactics," Senator La Follette continues on the same subject: "It is characteristic of Roosevelt that while he solves upon issues that make good propaganda and gives them publicity, he has not the patience nor stability nor depth of conviction to prevent his sacrificing essential principles and permanent results to personal considerations and temporary advantage. It was this that made his administration as president, although a time of reform agitation, barren of constructive legislation and a period for growth of evils that might have been avoided under wiser leadership. The party movement promises to illumine this inherent weakness of Roosevelt as has no other phase of his political career. He completely dominates its policy and the real significance of his tactics is revealed as it could not be in the more complex political situations in which he has been a conspicuous figure."

Sensor La Follette is caustic in writing of Col. Roosevelt's references to bosses, saying: "The last thing to be tolerated of a new political party, professing to stand for progress, is to hark back to boss and machine rule through threats and coercion of candidates for office. And yet, Roosevelt threatens to denigrate senators, congressmen, governors, sheriffs, and coroners unless they declare for him."

BECKER MAY CLEAR POLICE GRAFT CASE BY HIS CONFESSION

Police Lieutenant Held In Connection With Rosenthal Murder Reported to be Breaking Down.

New York, Aug. 9.—The Tombs prison keepers seemed to think today that Police Lieut. Becker was on the point of breaking down and there were reports at the public prosecutor's office that the police officer under indictment for the murder of gambler Herman Rosenthal might turn state's evidence.

District Attorney Whitman conferred with John F. McIntyre, counsel for the accused lieutenant, but said that no terms for a confession were discussed.

Mr. Whitman said, "I have hope that Becker, who is a shrewd man, many decide that his best interest will require him to tell the whole truth. If he should do that I would have to think over pretty carefully what my attitude should be."

"While murder is a graver crime than blackmail it might be that I would decide in the event of a confession to ask some clemency for Becker. One of the greatest accomplishments for the good of the community would be to find out who are the big blackmailers in the police department and to abolish that treacherous and wicked system."

The grand jury is said to have learned many things to show that Lieutenant Becker has made money very rapidly within the last few months. In one savings bank he was found to have $3,000 on deposit while the prosecutor has been told of other savings banks accounts which will be investigated.

"Bald" Jack Rose in his confession says Becker told him that he cleared up $30,000 in four months.

Within a few days the grand jury will hand down about six additional indictments. The indictments will be drawn against Louis Rosenzweig, "Whitey" Lewis, Harry Horowitz, Frank Cirofici and probably Jack Sullivan and Sam Schepus and indictments against certain police officials for grafting will be drawn later.

Lieut. Becker made a brief statement in his cell this morning denying the report that he contemplated making a confession.

"I would like it understood once and for all," said Becker, "that I have nothing to confess. That will be proven very clearly when I have my day in court. I never felt better in my life and any one who has the privilege of seeing me will appreciate that."

The Story of a Certain John "The Apostle of Carelessness"

By J. R. HAMILTON. Former Advertising Manager Waukegan's, Philadelphia.

"John," said Mrs. John one day, when she couldn't overlook him any longer, "you are the best example of my bad taste I have ever possessed. Your clothes haven't been pressed for a month; your shoes look as if you worked in a brickyard; your collars are more frazzled than your beard and if you stopped to shear your cuffs the price of cotton would go down like a bob-tailed kite. Now either you must get some new clothes or come home through the alley. The new janitor is getting suspicious of you and I can't stand the strain."

And John said what John has always said since the word was first created. But when he went down town that morning after reading the latest front page sensations and the stock report, he dropped into the first store that had a window display and said "Gimme a suit a'clothes."

And the little obscure dealer in clothing looked at him twice and gave him one. Also he gave him some shirts and socks and collars and tried to sell him some jewelry "from sure gold." So John went away with a full heart and an empty pocketbook.

That night they called on the Smiths. Smith looked as immaculate as a stage lover and John looked like a prize boob at a country fair. Then Mrs. Smith proceeded to treat the delicate situation with a meat-axe.

"Why," she said coyly, "you've both got on new suits, haven't you?"

The way Mrs. John looked at her husband isn't going to be described here because this paper goes through the mails, but the point is, John had to come back somehow, so he said.

"How much did you pay for your old suit, Smith?"

And Smith said, "I got this suit, four shirts, two suits of underwear, six pairs of silk socks, a dozen collars and these shoes for twenty-five dollars. You see I was laying in a good supply from the summer sales."

"How—how did you find out about these—summer sales?" said John who was now reduced to the meekness of gelatine.

"Why," said Smith, laughing "I read the advertising in today's Gazette."

"Gazette," and again John repeated the immortal word, "So while you were reading the Clearance ads, I was deeply engrossed in the subject of Steel preferred." There's a moral to this tale, and the moral is, "When you want clothes or shoes or furniture, the thing to read is a clothing or shoe or furniture advertisement and not a stock report."

The inspection was made for the purpose of obtaining ideas as to the advisability of substituting an automobile hose wagon for the fire police patrol wagon and hose wagon now hose wagon now hosed in the east side station.

Every courtesy was shown the visitors by the Rockford fire department. A practical demonstration was given them and they were permitted to ride on the apparatus in an exhibition run to a point one mile from the station. The trip out and back was made in five minutes time, the trucks successfully negotiated a hill with as sharp a gradient as the Court street hill though not so long. An exhibition of the aerial ladder with an automatic rising device was also given.

Station No. 1 at Rockford is entirely equipped with self-propelled apparatus, and the other stations are partially equipped. Most of the apparatus was made by one company. It is in an excellent condition and is always ready to start promptly.

It is believed that a substantial economy could be effected by substituting an automobile hose wagon for the fire patrol and hose wagon at the east side station. The salary of one fireman and the constant expense of maintaining a team would be eliminated. The expense would vary according to the number of calls and be much less than at present. Rockford maintains a combination fire wagon, similar to what is proposed for this city, for about $100 a year. The east side fire house will require alternations within a short time whether a change is made or not.

ROBERT COURTNEY AGREES TO FURNISH PEACE BOND.

Declares He Bears His Wife No Malice And Again Denies He Made Threats To Take Her Life.

The case of the State versus Robert J. Courtney, charged with threatening to take the life of his wife, was brought up for trial this morning, but was dismissed when Courtney agreed to sign a personal bond to keep the peace, and the Judge on the motion of District Attorney ruled that he be allowed to give such bond. He was able to obtain the required surety of $500. Courtney protested that he bore no malice against his wife and denied that he had made any threat to take her life. "He was willing to keep away from her altogether in the future."

DARIEN BUSINESS SECTION SUFFERS DESTRUCTIVE FIRE.

Three Store Buildings, Owned by Matthew F. Lathers of Beloit Burned—Loss $25,000.

Fire early yesterday morning destroyed three buildings at Darien, causing a loss which is estimated at $25,000. All three buildings were on the east side of the main street and were owned by Matthew F. Lathers of Beloit. Mr. Lathers estimates his loss on the buildings at $8,000, with $5,000 insurance. It is probable that the entire business section would have been destroyed had not a telephone call been sent to Delavan and the fire department there responded promptly.

The stores burned were occupied by Linderman & Humphrey, dealers in general merchandise, who carried a stock worth $12,000, insured for $7,500, Charles Frey, a jeweler, with stock worth $1,000 and the barber shop and pool hall of Mr. Schrant. The latter's loss was about $300. The Vanderhoof cigar factory was burned, entailing a loss of $2,000. One man was compelled to jump from a second story window to escape the flames and suffered a badly injured hand. The fire was discovered by the engineer of a freight train switching in the yards, who succeeded in arousing the people of the village by blowing the engine whistle.

WEST SALEM LIGHTING PLANT ORDERED IMPROVED

Railroad Commission May Grant Certificate of Public Convenience For Erection of New Plant.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Madison, Wis., Aug. 8.—The public lighting system in the village of West Salem, La Crosse county, must be improved the next six months or the state railroad commission may grant a certificate of public convenience and necessity for the erection of a new plant. This is the order of the commission made public today. Not long ago the village of West Salem and a number of residents and taxpayers filed a petition against E. C. Swarthout, owner of the existing plant, asking for a certificate of convenience and necessity, or in the alternative for an order requiring the owners of the present plant to enlarge and rebuild it and to improve and extend the service.

The commission made an investigation of the plant and found that a number of new improvements are immediately required.

"If for any reason the utility cannot comply with such requirements," says the decision, "the commission will then consider that portion of the petition which relates to the declaration that public convenience and necessity require a second public utility to engage in the lighting business in the village of West Salem."

HAS HELPED TO DRAFT FOUR PARTY PLATFORMS.

Dr. Charles McCarthy of Madison, Has Had Unique Experience in Politics This Year.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Madison, Wis., Aug. 9.—Dr. Charles McCarthy, Wisconsin legislative reference librarian, has returned from Chicago, where he assisted in drafting the platform of the new Progressive party.

"Have you joined the Bull Moose party?" he was asked.

"Well," he answered, "I have now written parts of four national platforms—the Republican, Democratic, La Follette and Progressive. Now guess for yourself and take your choice. It was a remarkable convention. Evidently the economic agitation now going on in Europe is reaching America. Whoever will be the next president will be absolutely controlled by public opinion and not by old party promises. The organized power of the newspapers and magazines, backed by economists, will be the ruling force in America, and the real present for the future, whatever the party label may be."

"This is the La Follette platform—not so definite in some things, more definite in others. Evidently the churches, the social workers in the cities, the labor unions and organized farmers' associations, with a strong body of college economists are the backbone of this new movement."

The greatest turf activity on the continent is now seen at Churchill Downs, the plant of the Louisville Jockey club. This is being made into one of the handsomest tracks the country has seen. The remodeling is being done under the direction of Churchill Downs, the general manager, and will cost $25,000. The thirty ticket sellers are to be in a straight line, and the cashiers will be a line with these. Arrangements have been made for a Paris-mutual ticket room. All of the stables adjacent to the paddock have been removed and there is now an unobstructed view of the entire race course from the paddock section.

Pitcher Brennan, of the Philadelphia National league club, has developed a case of diphtheria and has been quarantined. Not only will this prevent his taking part in any of the games for some time, but Grover Cleveland Alexander, the mainstay of Doolin's pitching staff, who has been living with Brennan, also may be affected. The dismemberment of these two stars, admittedly the best pitchers the club owns, will materially affect their chances of remaining in the first division, it is feared.

It is declared George Horrine, the owners of the Cleveland motor-drome now building a rotodrome in St. Louis, plan a string of the new speedways over the country. A national league is likely next year.

WET GROUNDS MAY PREVENT PLAYING

Fair Weather Needed To Insure Games In Commercial League As Scheduled Tomorrow.

Unless the heavy rain clouds which continue to hang over the country so ominously are dispelled by drying winds and warm sunshine, the no game sign will be hung at the gates of the Commercial league parks tomorrow afternoon. This will be a disappointment to many of the fans as well as to the teams who are anxious to boost their percentages. The following is the schedule for tomorrow:

At Athletic Park: First game, Lewis Knitting company vs. Y. M. C. A., second game, Gazette vs. Janesville Machine company.

At park association grounds: First game, Hanson Furniture company vs. Recorder; second game, Parker Pen vs. Northwestern.

Saturday—All $25 summer suits, excepting blacks and blues, $15. Reberg's.

Approaching the Perfect Life.

Have good will to all that lives, letting unkindness die and greed and wrath; so that your lives be made like soft airs passing by.—Light of Asia.

California wonder, did not sweep away all records at Stockholm because the Swedes would not permit him to leap in the manner by which he attained heights that dwarfed all previous accomplishments. Team mates of Horine report that the Swedes insisted the Californian was putting his head over the bar first and insisted the only proper procedure was to send his feet in advance. His style had never been criticised in America and the awkwardness accompanying the forced change prevented him from doing full credit to himself.

It was just 22 years ago that Cy Young pitched his first big league ball game. The Cleveland Spiders pitched him against Pop Anson's Chicago team. He won his game 8 to 1 permitting three hits, issuing the same number of passes and fanning five men. He isn't the same Cy any more. Lately he tried to pitch against the Wiedemanns, an amateur Cincinnati team and was driven from the box in two innings, four runs being scored. "When I cannot beat an amateur team, it is high time I quit the game," he said crestfallen.

New York nationals might as well forget their ambition to establish a record for the greatest number of games won in a season. But they ought to better the work of last season when they won the pennant with 99 victories and 54 defeats.

The Wonderful Automatic System

Monday evening we placed on exhibition at Putnam's Store a small automatic telephone system, of the kind we hope to install in our new exchange.

Hundreds of Janesville telephone users have seen this wonderful telephone apparatus and almost without exception have expressed the desire to have it installed in Janesville.

Within the past few days a number of persons representing our competitor have been making statements in Janesville that the automatic equipment is not efficient and that it has not been successful elsewhere.

For the information of those who will not be able to visit the demonstration at Putnam's Store, we wish to say that in our opinion the automatic telephone equipment is the best in the market and that it is popular with the people wherever used, without exception. We publish below a list of the cities and towns where this automatic apparatus is in use:

These automatic exchanges have been in service from one to twelve years. In each place where there is competition the automatic is preferred by the users to manual. In Lincoln, Nebraska, Sioux City, Iowa, and Richmond, Indiana, the automatic has driven the manual service (Bell) out of the field.

The total number of automatic telephones in use is about 375,000, installed in little more than ten years, in the face of the persistent and tremendous opposition of the Bell telephone interests. After eighteen years of patent monopoly the Bell companies had, in its entire system covering all of the United States, but 400,000 telephones.

Does this evidence of the wide use and popularity of the automatic indicate that it is in any respect unsuccessful?

CONSIDER QUESTION.

Voters throughout the twenty-second senatorial district who really seek to have the present income tax stricken from the statute books or at least revised, must thoroughly understand the situation and not cast their ballot away at the primaries. With McGovern, republican, and Schmitt, democratic candidates for gubernatorial nomination pledged to the present law, and Karel, democratic candidate for governor, opposed to the law, the average voter believes his duty will be done if he votes for the nomination of Karel at the primaries.

While doubtless this would be a step in the right direction, still the fact remains that the main issue has been overlooked. It is the legislature, not the governor of the state, that can modify the law. It is the individual vote of the various senators and members of the assembly that can aid in this matter and instead of voting for a man for governor known to be opposed to the law, the only way to accomplish your desires of having the law modified or repealed is to vote for a candidate for the state senate or assembly that is opposed to it. The governor can only suggest to the legislature, he has not an actual vote except his veto power, which can be overridden by the legislature on a two-thirds vote.

However, enthusiastic you may be for the repeal of the laws that are obnoxious to the industries of the state, do not be carried away by the idea that a vote for Karel at the primary will accomplish this. Vote for the candidates who look at matters as you do. In the senatorial contest there are three candidates. Mr. Whitte is the only one who has come out openly and stated his views on this matter, standing for an economical administration of state affairs, separation of the university from politics, and opposed to the income tax. Mr. Gettle and Mr. Cunningham, the other two candidates, are honest men and firm in their beliefs, but they do not view matters as does Mr. Whitte, and consequently if you desire to affect these changes you must cast your ballot for him at the primaries.

You can not do this by voting the democratic ticket for Karel. You can not vote for a democratic candidate for governor and a republican candidate for the state senate. You must vote either the republican or democratic tickets straight. Of course, you do not need to vote for every candidate on either ticket, but it must be democratic or republican at the top—there is no splitting hairs or tickets at a primary. Think this over and if you favor what Mr. Whitte stands for go to the republican primaries and vote for him.

The fog end of the war in Mexico is no joke to the Americans who have been unable to get out of Chihuahua and Conora. It may mean death to them.

NO PIPES FOR PAN.

The Chicago Tribune pays the following tribute to the present weather in the following editorial that is worth re-printing as it is so true of conditions during the present cool and "moist" month.

"Pan has a cold in the head, the rheumatism and a touch of neuralgia, along with a sore throat and cricks in his back. He can't blow his pipes, and the woods are silent.

"Pan has the sniffles, there is no music in him, and the woodland orchestra is a sadly discouraged organization these days. Possibly the katydids will come along in a week or two with their sibilant 'cellos and play the six weeks' overture to Frost, but thus far there has been reason to suspect that Frost is stealing softly up in rubber shoes and that he'll be on the stage before the Katydid can tune up.

"The crickets are a sad lot. In beneficent seasons they and the locusts swing a very cicatoun of sound into the night, a rich tapestry of interwoven soprano notes for the moon to filter through. It's a sad orchestra now. If the crickets play at all it is querulously. The thrush has abandoned his vesper service. The whip-poorwill's threnody is the most cheerful song of the woods.

"The pipes of Pan are clogged. The musicians may grumble, but they cannot play. Rheumatism is in their legs. A weak squeak or two as the night settles, and then the woods are quiet."

STATE OR FEDERAL.

Now that the republicans, democrats, prohibitionists, progressives and socialists have all held their national conventions and the game of politics has strengthened out into a fight to the finish, the question of electors in the various states is a question of discussion. Are they state or federal? An exchange handles the matter in the following editorial which fits the case right here in Wisconsin.

"With the personal and partizan issues that are at stake as grave as they are, it was too much to expect that matters of dispute between the republican and the national progressive parties should be kept from involving all instruments of power or sources of possible authority in the controversy. The passions stirred by the crisis are too elemental to be held in check by any considerations of reverence or of prudence. Hence litigation has come which already has involved the federal supreme court, and will even more are the conflict ends. Inasmuch as one of the issues dividing the litigants as partisans is the status, functions and character of the judiciary, the infelicity of an appeal to the courts at this juncture is apparent. New fuel has been provided for a fire already well fanned.

"However, since the issue has been joined and controversy begun which awaits final decision by a full bench in October, what is the fundamental, organic political issue at stake in this Kansas case and others akin to it? It is the old one of states vs. nation. States unquestionably have the right to determine methods of nomination and election of electors, and these methods may and do vary. As the plaintiffs in this case view it, the supreme court of Kansas having declined to settle what, in its opinion, is a political and not a civil issue, it is now the duty of the nation to protect Kansas voters whom they—the plaintiffs—represent in their rights under a state law. In short, it is argued, federal power may do what the state will not. Justices Pitney and Van Devanter find no precedents to guide them in this issue as between nation and state, and wisely decline to assume responsibility for making one, leaving that to a full court. Meantime without prejudice to either side the factional fight for the winning set of electors may go on."

THE FIRST RESULTS.

By comparison with the heroism which glorified the terrible tragedy of the Titanic, ordinary giving of money to help the helpless and relieve distress seems commonplace. It is so much less dramatic that it attracts relatively little attention, and it is so much more frequent and familiar that the world has less need of its lesson and its inspiration.

Yet, before the Titanic horror grows dim in memory, it ought to be made plain that the giving for the victims of that slaughter who were left in need of help in the form of money, has been on a magnificent scale. The funds in Great Britain have passed the extraordinary limit of $2,000,000 and they still grow.

Yet all this relief has been needed. The sum in the possession of various committees is no more than sufficient to keep up allowances which have been made to those who were dependent on lost passengers and members of the crew. There will be no money left after providing for urgent wants. The extent of the effects of the tragedy has been found so great that no ordinary relief fund could have prevented dire misery.

Under such circumstances the giving for the sufferers has been as timely as it is generous and impressive. It is one more line proof of the kindness, brotherliness and goodness of human nature when the best in it is appealed to effectively.

Never did the federal government's investments in the lake highways yield better returns than this year. The traffic is immense and the rates are low.

Nation-wide woman suffrage is still far in the future, but it is coming nearer every time the hands go around the clock.

The finer and more wonderful machine the harder to make it "fool proof." Government is a very complex machine.

ON THE SPUR OF THE MOMENT

By ROY K. MOULTON.

From The Hickeyville Clarion.

Mr. Zabelle Rix, the eminent painter and decorator, was engaged by Mr. Phineas L. Perkins to paint the latter's house. Mr. Rix is very near-sighted. He started early one morning and had nearly finished painting the house next door before he discovered the mistake. Mr. Elias Pettibone, the owner of that house, threatened to have the law on Mr. Rix if the latter did not peel the paint off at once. Mr. Rix immediately started to do so and expects to have it all off within a month or two, but expects some difficulty in fastening it onto Mr. Perkins' house when he has removed it from that of Mr. Pettibone. A great many scientists and philosophers of the neighborhood have abandoned farm work altogether to watch the operation and to offer advice.

Some of the dry counties, according to an esteemed contemporary, are having considerable difficulty with the question of the manufacture and sale of wines and cider. Sweet cider can be legally made and sold but the trouble is that sweet cider becomes hard cider at the least provocation, and then it is illegal. It is sometimes difficult for the authorities to distinguish between sweet and hard cider, but an old expert, Luke Binkins, gives the following as a sure method:

"Take a quart jug and place it on your right arm, with your elbow bent and put the top of the jug again your lower lip. Leave a little space as an air vent and tip the jug 'till it goes ooglee. Keep on elevating your elbow 'till the jug sounds hollow. If you get a stummick-ache, she's sweet; if you get a headache, she's hard, and if you get both, she's vinegar."

That's What They All Say

"Dear Cousin, you must come out on my farm this summer and spend six weeks. I'll notify you when to come."

"I don't smoke enough to hurt me."

"My wife never tells me where to

It's a thick, fat year in politics. Wilson and Roosevelt were very much in action on the same day.

If shouts were votes the battle would be all over, months ahead of the schedule.

The weather, at least, has no doubt about voting wet this year.

Heart to Heart Talks.

By EDWIN A. NYE.

YOUR HUSBAND.

Says a traveled writer:

"The American husband is the best husband in the world." Which is true. There are exceptions of course.

But take him all in all, in character, in generosity of motive, in fairness and fidelity, as breadwinner and protector, as husband and father, the American type is the finest, truest and best.

The American husband, to his family, is "as the shadow of a great rock in a weary land." Is he, I wonder, fully appreciated?

"Advice to husbands" is common enough and all right in its place. And the plaint of "unappreciated wives" is exploited by many writers who probably tell the truth.

However—

It also is true that some wives are obsessed by self pity and sigh over their "bumrums lot" who are so engrossed in their own woes they overlook the man at their side who needs help and sympathy.

Totally swallowed up by her graverances or absorbed in her pleasures many a wife forgets the man who wins her living.

Dear Mrs.—

I am not unmindful of your deserts as wife and mother, of your trials as homemaker. But—

If your husband is honest, industrious, clean minded, if he gives the best that is in him for the sake of the family, you have in him the greatest gift the gods can bestow upon a woman.

The good husband gives without stint and freely. When the family bills are paid there is little left for him. He is a sort of hired hand for the family.

And if wife and children are really grateful and appreciative he minds not the labor and sacrifice.

But if when he has done his utmost there is lack of sympathy, if, worse than all, there is the hint that he might have done better, then God pity that husband!

Your man, my dear woman, is made of like soul stuff with you. He may be bigger, stronger physically, but his sensibilities are just about as keen as yours.

He finds it easy to do and dare for those he loves and who love him. Should he miss the love and helpfulness that is due him he misses all that life holds for him.

Madam: If your husband is manly and if he makes himself a shield for you and yours against the slings and arrows of outrageous fortune, bend your soul in thankfulness.

Drain of the Middle Men.
Little middle men are eating the life out of New York and drinking its heart's blood. All this discourages housekeeping and encourages divorce, desertion and damnation.—New York Press.

RAN AN AUTOMOBILE WITHOUT A LICENSE

Charge Preferred Against Allen Welch Who Pleads Not Guilty—Trial Set For Wednesday.

Allen Welch, a Janesville young man was this morning arraigned before Judge Charles Fifield on the charge of operating an automobile without a license number in violation of the state law. He pleaded "not guilty" to the charge and his trial was set for ten o'clock next Wednesday morning. Welch was arrested at the intersection of Academy and West Milwaukee streets by Patrolman Doran at about 7:15 o'clock last evening. He explained that he had bought the automobile from a local salesman with the understanding that he was to secure a license number. While waiting the arrival of the number he had used a garage number but lost it and then borrowed one at the Bug's garage. Inquiries made at the Bug's establishment resulted in bringing a denial that Welch had one of their numbers.

CHARGE VIOLATION
FEDERAL LABOR LAW

St. Paul and Soo Lines Defendants in Civil Suits Instituted by Federal Authorities.

The federal government on Thursday instituted civil suits against the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul and the Soo line railroads for alleged violations of the federal sixteen hour labor law, as it is alleged that these divisions required train crews to work for a longer period at one time than sixteen hours.

Summons were served on Secretary E. W. Adams of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad and upon John A. Millington, general agent of the Soo line in Milwaukee.
The men are cited to appear before
United States District Judge Geiger.
In the summons it is stated that the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul road is guilty of having violated the federal statute on five separate occasions. It is said that the crew, consisting of an engineer, a fireman, a conductor and two brakemen on train No. 74, running from Savannah, Ill., to Milwaukee, starting from Savannah on Dec. 14 and 16, 1911 at 10:
45 a. m., arrived in Milwaukee at 4:40 and 4:45 p. m., respectively, and crews of train No. 72 were required to violate the statute on the two separate occasions and that the crew of train No. 62 was also required to violate the statute.

The fine for violation of this statute, upon conviction, is $500 for each man required to work more than sixteen hours. This will mean that if the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul road is found guilty it will have to pay $12,500.

The citation for the appearance of John A. Millington alleges that the Soo line violated the sixteen hour law through requiring the crew of extra train No. 2609 to work from 5 o'clock on the morning of April 1, when the train left Fon du Lac, until 11:45 o'clock that night when the train arrived at Waukesha.

It is also charged that the road is guilty of a violation of another part of the law which provides that members of the crew having worked sixteen hours straight are to have a ten hour period of rest, and that the road required the members of this crew to return to work at 6:45 o'clock the next morning. Another violation of this law is also alleged in the citation.

The fine which the Soo line will pay should the decision be against the company, will be $4,000.

These are the second set of summonses to be issued by United States District Attorney Goff in a campaign to secure the recognition and enforcement of this particular statute. The first suit of the campaign was started on June 14 against the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad, and the fines in this case may amount to $7,500.

A date for the hearings on the cases has not been set.

WISCONSIN LEADS STATES
IN NUMBER OF MILCH COWS.

Government Reports Show That This State Average Nine Such Cows
To a Farm.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Madison, Wis., Aug. 9.—Government reports recently issued showing Wisconsin's precedence in the dairy industry have been followed by the preparation of tables here which show that there are nine milch cows per farm in this state. The government estimate of Jan. 1, 1912, placed the number of such cows in Wisconsin at 1,564,000. New York is second with 1,495,000, Iowa has 1,393,000, Minnesota 1,107,000, and Illinois 1,049,000.
Of the total number of dairy cattle in the United States (20,699,000), practically one-fourth (or 5,053,000) are in Wisconsin and its adjoining sister states, Iowa, Minnesota and Illinois.

The area of high barometer central this morning over the Northern Plains is expected to cause fair weather.

NO TROUBLE HERE
OVER POSTAL LAW

Recent Order of Postoffice Department Has Not Made Necessary Much Inquiry at Local Postoffice.

That the postoffice law regarding the use of the general delivery occasions no trouble here, or the necessity of making many inquiries regarding the reasons why people calling at the general delivery window desire to get their mail there, is the statement today of Postmaster C. L. Valentine. The law has been in effect for some time and has always been observed here, although there has not been much necessity for inquiry, as many of the people who call for their mail at the general delivery window are well known to the clerks in charge. An order was recently issued by the postoffice department at Washington, calling attention to the law, and in the larger cities it has caused some protest from persons who did not want to state the reasons why they received their mail at the general delivery. When they learned, however, that they must do so in order to receive their mail, they have had to give the required information. Since the receipt of the department's order it has not been necessary to question any of the patrons of the general delivery closely. The order was promulgated by the department, it is understood, to prevent minors from receiving mail clandestinely, and in some cases, to stop any correspondence that might have any connection with the white slave traffic.

Diamonds

SOME DIAMONDS are cheaper than others—Why? Because they may be imperfect (an eye glass may be necessary to find the flaw, but it is there just the same and spoils the brilliancy) they may be off in shape or cutting, they may be absolutely perfect and lack brilliancy, they may be off color just a little. All these points lessen their value and when you purchase one under the market value do not think you have a bargain until you are sure of the quality. It takes many years of experience to judge a diamond and as we have made a study of it for 30 years we leave it to you if there can be any better, if as good, judges of diamonds in the city.

THE HOUSE OF A THOUSAND CANDLES.

prolific producer of statesmen, politicians, poets and authors, claims Meredith Nicholson for her own. He is the author of "The House of a Thousand Candles" the play billed for Myers Theatre on Sunday Aug. 11 Mat. and Eve. The story of the play deals with the doings of an Indiana summer resort and is replete with interest from beginning to end. The piece is a novelty, for it can justly be termed a "Mystery play", as there is an air of the mysterious throughout the piece that keeps one on the "quiver". Mr. Peimrose, the producer, has assembled an excellent scenic production, also a very competent cast. Mr. Holland as Bates and Miss Daly as Marion.

HOT WEATHER IS QUICK TO AFFECT THE BOWELS

Well-Known Fact That Extreme Heat Conduces to Chronic Constipation.

The disposition to eat cold food and indulge in iced drinks is one reason why constipation and diarrhoea is so prevalent in summer, and there is no time when people should more carefully avoid bowel disturbances, as much serious disease is directly traceable to these conditions. We need all of our strength to withstand the enervating effect of heat.

To regulate the bowels and quickly relieve even the most aggravated case of constipation, the combination of simple laxative herbs with pepsin, known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is highly recommended by all who have ever used it. Unlike cathartics and violent purgatives, Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin acts gently on the stomach, liver and bowels, without griping or other discomfort, bringing relief in an easy, natural manner. It can be used with perfect safety by the most delicate woman or child, and yet is equally effective for the strongest constitution. Mild, pleasant to take, and inexpensive, it is the ideal family laxative. TONE OF MARKET IS REPORTED CHEERFUL

New York Investments Are Firm, But Quiet—Some Securities Sell Rapidly.

New York, Aug. 9.—For the first time in fully a year, there is more activity among investment issues available on the market than among new issues. The reason for this is that both bankers and corporations have allowed a lull to come in new financing operations which, however, is not likely to last much beyond the end of the current month. This breathing spell will undoubtedly have a beneficial effect on the market. After fully twelve months of unprecedented activity in the output of new securities there was bound to be a certain accumulation awaiting absorption; by the beginning or middle of September, it is entirely probable that this accumulation will be greatly reduced or entirely worked off.

Under present conditions which include the demand for higher rates of interest and dividends on securities than in former years and the restrictions imposed on railroads through the attitude of the Interstate Commerce Commission, it must be expected that railroad securities and municipal issues will continue to sell more slowly than securities that meet the present day requirements more fully. Well secured bonds and preferred stocks of both industrial and public utility corporations promise to be the leading features of fall business just as they were in the earlier months of the year.

The question has sometimes been brought up of whether the investment public has absorbed upward of a quarter billion dollars in new securities since the first of the year while the older established issues have been dull and in light demand. Here is the reason. A great majority of new issues have been based on established industrial plants or combinations of operating properties under new forms of corporate ownership. The financial organization of such new companies has been conducted in the only way possible under existing circumstances; on a basis that allows capital a return in keeping with the advanced price it now requires. Older securities, were already selling on a basis that reduced their income yield to a point beyond which capital did not find it profitable to buy them and thus the demand has turned to the new. These latter having been based on enterprises of already established earning power, the investor has not been putting his capital in stocks and bonds of an experimental nature. This means that the investment situation is on a solid basis and its effect on the general business situation is to add to its solidity.

The far reaching effects of liberal expenditure of investment capital are illustrated by the great earnings recently reported by such companies as the General Electric, Westinghouse and Western Electric Companies and which were reflected in the 30 per cent stock dividend of the former. So much of modern development of every sort is based upon the use of electricity that it redounds especially to the benefit of such companies.

Business is still being conducted with very slight change in prices. Recent features among investment stocks were the rise in Dupont de Nemours Powder shares which came after the great advance in the Standard Oil and American Tobacco issues is regarded as another illustration of unexpectedly beneficial results from the operation of the Sherman Law. American Light & Traction has sold well over $400, a share and Pacific Gas & Electric has reflected the very equitable attitude taken by the public service commission of the State of California, as regards to when territory shall or shall not be opened to competitive operations between such companies.

There seems to be a unanimity of opinion among bankers that the situation is intrinsically sounder than it has been for a long while. Even the prospects for a higher money market are construed favorably, as indicative of more active general trade conditions. There is no liquidation of any sort in progress and the great preponderance of orders coming into the market are for the purchase, not for the sale of securities.

Canadian Pacific.—This company is reporting extraordinarily good earnings. I believe its stock is a safe investment but would buy at times of recession only, rather than after an advance.

Standard Gas & Electric Pfd.—This company has recently issued a balance sheet showing a surplus of $1,008,000. This indicates an accumulation of more than a full year's 8 per cent dividend on the preferred stock. I consider it a well chosen investment at prevailing quotations.

MARY ELLEN'S WAY

She Convinces Mr. Mary Ellen That Entertaining Old Friends Is Not An Unmixed Joy

DO you remember that bunch of fellows I used to go with before we were married?" said Mr. Mary Ellen, as he settled into his easy chair after dinner. "I ran into some of them today and they were saying how long it had been since we had all met. So I thought I'd have them to dinner some night."

"That will be splendid," replied Mary Ellen. "There were six of them, weren't there?"

"Yes. A mighty lively crowd, too."

"I remember some of the things you used to do. What do they like best?"

"Oh, most anything."

"Seems to me, I remember your telling me about some of your supper. Wouldn't it be jolly to have the favorite dish of each?"

"That would be great," said Mr. Mary Ellen.

The night of the dinner arrived and the dining-room, with its snow-covered table, its gleaming silver, sparkling glass and flowers, looked most attractive. As the guests were ushered into it, they smiled with pleasant anticipation.

"Mr. Mary Ellen told me your favorite dishes, and so I tried to have them," said Mary Ellen brightly.

"That's kind of you," they chorused.

"He said, Mr. Davis, that you were so fond of that erbwurst soup when you were camping. So I hunted and hunted and finally got it."

Mr. Davis looked slightly blank. Erbwurst soup in the dining-room of a private house on a hot August night is a somewhat different proposition from erbwurst soup in the open. The men mopped their brows as they finished it.

"He told me of some supper where you all ate herring," Mary Ellen explained, as the next course came on.

In silence the men wrestled with herring.

Frankfurters, cabbage, onions, limburger, plum-duff, and butter-milk exemplified the taste of various others, as Mary Ellen delightedly explained as the various dishes were served.

Conversation waned. Mr. Mary Ellen cheerfully recalled old-time experiences, but the men didn't seem to find much pleasure in their memory.

After dinner, Mary Ellen led them into the parlor. "You sing, don't you, Mr. Simpson? I remember Mr. Mary Ellen's telling me you were always so fond of popular songs. So I got some especially for you."

Mr. Simpson looked pleased and began to roar.

Mary Ellen had thoughtfully placed boxes of cigars handy, but had failed to place ash trays, and soon there was a trail of ashes over carpets, tables, Mr. Mary Ellen's finely bound books which were a hobby with him and which Mary Ellen had laid about so the guests could inspect them.

As time seemed to hang rather heavy, she suggested cards, and Mr. Mary Ellen lost steadily. While they were playing she brought in some lemonade, and unseen by Mr. Mary Ellen joggled Simpson's elbow so that he spilled the lemonade over the rug in Mr. Mary Ellen's den where the game was in progress.

He apologized profusely. But Mary Ellen said blithely, "Oh, never mind. Mr. Mary Ellen isn't fussy."

At this Mr. Mary Ellen glared, for he was rather particular about his things.

After they had departed, Mr. Mary Ellen looked about at the wreckage.

"Everything is in a mess, isn't it?" he said disgustedly. "They've changed a lot. Simpson can't sing any more than an old cat, and Davis has no sense whatever. They've nearly ruined some of my books, and look at that rug! And I lost twenty dollars in that poker game."

"They don't seem as nice as they used to be," admitted Mary Ellen. "But I'm sure you did your best to make them have a good time. You really have to entertain your old friends once in awhile, but I guess you are glad you don't have to do it often."

"You bet I am," agreed Mr. Mary Ellen, "and believe me, they won't get here again very soon."

And Mary Ellen smiled a triumphant, complacent smile as she brushed some ashes off a very special edition of Stevenson.

The Evening Chit-Chat

BY RUTH CAMERON

THIS YEAR.

DID you know that cerise and purple were an exquisite color combination?

I never knew it before, but I have just acquired that information, and it is such a surprise to me that I want to share it. It was supplied to me by a young friend of mine who has a reputation for good dressing, and was imparted apropos of a large hat, composed chiefly of purple violets and trimmed with two cerise plumes. I commented upon the hat as an outrage of good taste, and my companion seemed most surprised. "Why, I think that's pretty," she said. "You know cerise and purple are all right together this year."

What, I wonder, has the year 1912 done to deserve that laws of nature should be suspended this year? For surely that must have happened. Last year and forever before, cerise and purple was a combination to make even the least aesthetic shudder. This year it produces a harmony.

Now please do not conclude by my inability to admire this combination that I am a dowdy-minded person who does not like stylish things. I think I appreciate a truly stylish hat or gown as much as anybody, and I realize that the wand of style can transform many things. For instance, it can make a bath towel desirable material for a gown. But this I maintain—that there are some immutable facts and conditions which even the decrees of fashion cannot change.

For instance, I do not think that anything can make cerise and purple harmonize.

And again, I refuse to be convinced, when I am told that an indecently peek-a-boo waist is all right this year. I do not think that even the dictates of fashion can make immodesty modest.

Yet, again, when I go to buy china and am told that octagonal dishes are the prettiest thing nowadays, I beg to disagree. Despite the shop girl's emphatic assurances, I still remember "Curved is the line of beauty, straight is the line of duty," and prefer to have the dishes I am to live with for the next ten or twenty years exhibit the lines of beauty.

Yet one more example. When I see a very thin woman accentuating her thinness by dressing in an indecently skimpy gown and wearing, perhaps, no petticoats at all, I cannot think that even the fact that thinness is stylish this year makes her conduct good taste or her appearance attractive. Fashion is a wonderfully powerful force, and there are undoubtedly many things which it can influence, but there are also many laws of good taste, of artistic harmony, and of decency, with which not even the most emphatic demands of fashion should interfere.

In other words, there are some things which cannot possibly be right, proper or beautiful this year, any more than they have been for the last million years.

HOUSEHOLD TALKS

extent that they are fifteen cent a hundred more this week than last market day, and growers say that there will be no home-grown ones later this season.

Cucumber pickles for winter use—The best way to put down pickles is to wash them and put them in a crock with enough brine to cover them. Each time more cucumbers are added take out those already in and put the new ones in the bottom. Keep covered with a cloth, and every time the jar is opened scald the cloth, as the steam rises to the top it will adhere to it. Pickles will keep a year in brine, and when needed for use freshen them in lukewarm water, changing it after, and then let them stand twenty-four hours in vinegar, when they may be used.

Spiced Cherkins—Wash a peck of tiny cucumber pickles and put in a brine made of two pounds of coarse salt and enough water to cover them. Make the brine, first using boiling water, let it cool and see that the salt is dissolved before pouring it over the pickles. Let them stand in this brine thirty-six hours, then put them in a porcelain kettle and cover them with boiling water. After ten minutes pour this off and drain well and pack them into pickle bottles; cut four red peppers in strips and mix them with the pickles, or use tiny bell peppers or green chilies. Heat a gallon of vinegar to the boiling point and season with a half ounce of whole cloves, half an ounce of cinnamon, a blade or two of mace and a few pepper corns; simmer fifteen minutes, remove the spices and pour the boiling vinegar over the pickles.

Sweet pickles are prepared by soaking in strong brine and freshening as directed for all pickles. To every quart of vinegar add a cup of light brown sugar and the spices you prefer. When the sugar is dissolved and the vinegar well seasoned put in the pickles; remove from the fire at once as they must be heated through but not boiled. Pack in bottles and cover with the vinegar.

Vinegar must never be boiled; only brought to the point of boiling and then kept hot as boiling ruins its flavor. Unless brine is desired very strong a pound of coarse salt boiled in a gallon of water and then skimmed clear will answer for most pickles.

Alum water has been used for making pickles firm for many years and, as the proportion is small and pickles are only used for a relish, it has never been considered injurious. The process of using alum is described by Mrs. A. D. T. Whitney in Just How thus: "Calculate the quantity of powdered alum to each quart of vinegar. When this boils put in the pickles and keep them scalding, but by no means let them boil. Let them remain in this several hours, then put in cold water; when they are cold they are ready for the pickle-vinegar."

Grape vine leaves are sometimes used for "greening" the pickles. Then the alum is dissolved in cold water in the proportion given above. Place the pickles in the pickling kettle with alternate layers of grape leaves, water and alum water on and place over a moderate heat. Keep closely covered and when scalding place where the temperature will remain uniform and where it can not boil. Let it remain here for several hours, a half a day is not too long. Then cool the pickles in ice water and when very cold finish with vinegar.

SEASONABLE DISHES.

Now that the tender green peppers are more plentiful, and by the way, may be grown by any one in the garden, they may be used more lavishly for salads and in other ways.

Shred a green pepper in shaving-like pieces, and add it to the cottage cheese. It adds both to the appearance and flavor.

Stuffed green peppers are another favorite way of serving them. Stuff with any mixture of meat and seasonings and bake until thoroughly hot.

Small green tomatoes cut in slices, dipped in egg and crumbs and fried, are an addition to the menu.

Vegetable Salad.—Line a salad bowl with fresh crisp lettuce, fill with alternate layers of sliced cucumbers, radishes, onions, green peppers and tomatoes; cover with French dressing and garnish with rings of green pepper.

When the first new carrots are pulled slice a few, add a cup of green peas and a few small new potatoes, a handful of tiny onions; cook until tender in boiling water with a piece or two of dried bacon or salt pork. When ready to serve add a little milk. This is a gypsy dish, but very good.

Scotch Stew.—For this very young and tender vegetables are used. One pint of green peas, two young potatoes grated, three carrots and three small turnips, sliced, head of lettuce, a bunch of parsley and three tablespoons of rice. Cook all together until tender, and season with pepper, salt and a teaspoonful of sugar. A sprig of mint cooked with the green peas is liked by many.

Stuffed Summer Squash.—Wash and cut the tops from the squashes. Scoop out the seeds and fill the centers with sweet corn; steam until tender. Season with salt, pepper and cream; sprinkle thickly with crumbs and grated cheese and set in the oven for the crumbs to brown.

SAVE THE BABIES

Pertinent Suggestions on the care of the little ones during the hot months.

By DR. LESLIE D. SMITH, M. D., D. O.
Readers are invited to use this service by asking questions of Dr. Smith regarding specific cases. Answers will be published in these columns in the order questions are received. Personal replies will be given at no cost when stamped envelope is sent with question. Address all questions to Dr. Smith, care the Daily Gazette.
Dr. Smith will not prescribe in any case, but will gladly advise the best course to pursue.

The cry of the baby for mother's milk is a plea for its life, and often nothing else will save the life; God pity the baby who cannot get it.

The mother who has no breast milk for her child commands our deepest sympathy. The mother who is a victim of our social conditions or whose poverty prevents her nursing her babe, is in this age unfortunate, indeed. Some day motherhood will be elevated to the plane where it rightfully belongs. The mother, irrespective of her social or financial standing, will command our respect, and will have the financial support of the State when she most needs it.

Out of every one hundred (100) babies who die of "summer complaint," eighty-five are bottle fed, and only fifteen are breast fed. An "intellectual" city mother who is able to nurse her child successfully for the first year is almost a phenomenon, and only twenty-five per cent have been able to nurse as long as three months. I will say that I do not believe intellectually has anything to do with it more than this; the life she led, her habits of dress, of amusement, of eating, etc., have all but robbed her of the qualities and powers of sex.

It must be admitted that good artificial feeding is better than bad breast feeding. Some of the indications for artificial feeding are: When no milk is secreted, sickness of the mother, such as tuberculosis, epilepsy or chorea, when serious complications follow childbirth, such as severe hemorrhages, child-bed fever, blood poisoning or kidney disease; when the milk continues to disagree with the infant; when the supply is insufficient; when the mother's health is in a general run-down condition; when the mother has become again pregnant. Menstruation of the mother does not affect the milk as much as usually believed. It may at times, however, cause slight indigestion but is not a sound reason for discontinuing nursing.

Heart and Home Problems

MRS. ELIZABETH THOMPSON

Dear Mrs. Thompson:—How can I win a girl for my sweetheart and wife? I have known her since she was a little tot and now we are old enough to know just what love is. I have told her I love her. She said once she hated me, but a few days ago she told me she liked me as a true friend.

The best way to win a good woman's love, is to be sweet-tempered, let her see by your acts that you love her. Tell her you love her, quit often. Don't let any other fellow get ahead of you in his attentions.

Keep right on asking her to marry you unless she tells you that she loves some one else, or unless you have indisputable evidence that she really cannot love you in the way you wish.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a young girl of eighteen and engaged to a young man of twenty-one. He has a good character and no bad habits and says he fairly worships me. But he still goes with other girls, though he doesn't want me to speak to other men. (1)—How can I stop him in a pleasing way? (2)—Is there any harm in him kissing my hand? (3)—What will make a next Middy gown and a nice wedding gown, not too expensive?

VIOLET.
(1)—Tell him, in a good natured way, that you're glad he has so many nice friends, among the girls, but that while he is enjoying himself with them, of course he can't object to your occupying yourself with other company. Anyway, you don't want him to give up all his friends for you, do you? Even engaged people must know other folks, or they will bore each other to death. (2)—No. Isn't he rather timed to stop at your hand? (3)—Pique him. Summer flannel. (4)—Cotton voile and marquisette are inexpensive and make a pretty over a satin slip. Any of the soft silky fabrics would be nice and many are inexpensive.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1)—What is a good homemade solution to clean teeth? (2)—My lips are very large—I think they have become so from biting them. How can I make them smaller? (3)—How can I stop biting my nails? (4)—How many hours of sleep should a girl of thirteen have? (5)—How can I stop my hair splitting at the ends?

BROWN EYES.
(1)—Get some powdered chalk at the drugstore. Mix it with a little fine table salt. It is cheap, and about as good an antiseptic a toothpowder as one can have. (2)—I know of nothing that will make them smaller, stop biting them. (3)—Keep them

When it has been shown that artificial feeding must be adapted we must select that food which promises to be the best for the child. We must decide between the milk from three sources; another nursing woman—the wet nurse, the milk of the cow, and the manufactured infants foods. The baby who can have breast milk in addition to artificial food will do better than if dependent upon artificial food alone.

For various reasons the wet nurse is not so popular as in years past.

Cow's milk and mother's milk differ in many essential particulars, but the former can be modified so as to make the best substitute for the latter.

The proprietary foods are all very poor substitutes, at best. They are all of vegetable origin, and nature made no provision in young infants for their assimilation. Some of them may be used as an addition to cow's milk.

Dr. Borgen says, "To adapt cow's milk for the infants, I usually prescribe the top third of a quart bottle of milk which has stood for four hours, dilute with two parts of cereal water (the cereal water breaks up the curd adding lime-water to alkalinize it, and milk sugar, of each of the latter in the proportion of about one part for twenty parts of the mixture (milk and cereal water)."

Here is a suggestion Dr. Borgen made that I think is well worth considering. "It has been proven that woman's milk is much richer in lecithin than cow's milk. Lecithin forms a large percentage of our brain and nerves. A baby needs material to build up its nervous system. I can see only one way to remedy this deficiency in cow's milk. Every artificially fed child should be given lecithin."

Good fresh milk which has been kept clean and cold does not need to be sterilized or pasteurized.

Artificial feeding should be done under the direction of a nurse or a physician "who knows."

A WOMAN'S OBSERVATIONS

Edna K. Woolley

One reason that this nation has been so progressive and so courageous is that its people have been well fed.

Our citizens, in the past, have not been starved into submission or cowardice or foolishness.

We had plenty of good foods, plenty of good meat, milk, eggs—everything that is body-building and mind nourishing.

It gave us strength to go forth and conquer, made brain tissue that was inventive, and gave us a high quality of morality.

No matter what certain theorists may say to the contrary, nor how we may be preached at to be contented with what we can get, the fact remains that no country flourishes where its people are ill-fed and that the nation which permits its citizens to subsist on foods that barely keep life in the body is bound to fail in the big issues.

Japan had to feed its soldiers on American rations before it could whip Russia. England has been starving India until India has become a burden instead of a source of wealth. European countries are filled with paupers, they want to get rid of—paupers they gladly ship to us or any other country that will take them—people who became paupers because their lack of good food resulted in lack of strength and resourcefulness toward earning a living, and finally loss of pride.

Considering what has happened to other countries which have not seen to it that their people are well fed, isn't our own country taking alarming risks when it permits food trusts to put the cost of meats and their nourishing foods beyond the reach of not only the poor, but the middle classes, too?

Time was when every middle class family could have its daily roast of meat, or steak or chops. Even the poorer classes could at least have meat steaks.

Perhaps some of us ate too much meat. Every good thing can be overdone. But even so, haven't our well-fed natives "put it all over" their brethren who had to live on rice, black bread or vegetables—and possibly not enough of that?

See what happens to the half-starved foreigner who emigrates to this country. When he has had enough to eat, he begins to chirk up and take notice. When the good food begins to make new brain and body tissue, he develops energy, and pride, and he is soon one to be reckoned with, not as a pauper or an anarchist, but a useful citizen, part of that bone and sinew which makes a powerful nation.

DINNER STORIES

"Can you tell me," remarked a fair lady of her partner at the supper table, "who that exceedingly ugly man is? I mean the one sitting opposite you."

The gentleman smiled sardonically. "Oh, he's my brother!" came the reply.

The lady went scarlet, and her confusion was most painful.

"Oh, I'm so sorry!" she stammered, apologizing profusely. "You see, I did not notice the resemblance between you."

A moment later she turned to her neighbor on her left, who happened to be a woman.

"Do you see that handsome fellow over there, twisting his mustache?" she asked. "He's been watching me, and making eyes at me all evening. Who is he?"

The other woman turned scornfully and angrily upon her.

"Oh, he's only my husband!" came the biting reply.

Edwin F. Marvin of the Sons of Temperance said in a recent address in Bridgeport.

"It is easy to answer the opponents of temperance. At a mariners' hotel, for example, I once heard an opponent very easily answered.

"The preacher was urging his sailor audience not to drink; he was pointing out to them the divine admonitions against drinking, when a shell-back rose, instead.

"Captain," said the shell-back, I don't hic—believe everything that's printed in the Scriptures. Take that there—hic—walkin' on the water. I don't believe anybody can walk on the water. Can you—hic—do it yourself?"

"My friend," replied the minister, "I can walk better on water than I can on rum."

Senator Allee of Delaware, who served a few years in the senate, had a pair of very short legs. As a result there was little difference in his height when he was sitting or standing at his desk.

One morning, when the late Senator Frye of Maine, as president pro tempore, was presiding, Senator Allee arose and waved a bunch of papers, clamoring for recognition. Senator Frye was a bit short-sighted. He turned to the assistant clerk and asked testily:

"Rosa, is that little man from Delaware standing up or sitting down? I'm hanged if I can tell!"

MUSICAL COMEDY AT OPENING OF SEASON

Billy (Single) Clifford and Company Presented Clever Musical Skit
at Theatre Last Night.

Billy (Single) Clifford, with his company, appeared last evening at the theatre in the musical comedy, "The Man, the Girl and the Game," at the opening of the present theatrical season. Weather conditions were rather unfavorable for the opening performance, but in spite of this there was a fair-sized crowd at the production. The play given last evening has little strength of plot or merit as a piece of dramatic art, but serves the purpose for which it seems to be intended, that of introducing Mr. Clifford and other members of his company in some clever songs and comedies. There is supposed to be a plot to the play, in which Mr. Clifford as Charlie Porter, a rather irresponsible but good-natured fellow, who in order to secure money from his uncle says he is married, and then has to borrow his friend's wife to keep up the deception. Mr. Clifford occupies the center of the limelight throughout the entire play with his comedy and his singing, but a part at least of the celine rays fall on Miss Mae Collins, who takes the part of Dorothy Merry, Jack Trainer, who appears as Uncle Rudolph Cattermole, and Edward C. Clifford, as George Livingstone. The roles taken by the latter was rather a minor one, and he appeared only two times on the stage, but his baritone solos and his singing with Billy Clifford and Trainer brought hearty applause. Miss Collins took her part cleverly and answered several recalls for her song, "Hands Up." Of the song numbers, the best were: "Hands Up," "Mine," "Bring Back My Bonnie," and "Rose Marie," the latter three sung by Edward C. Clifford.

SIDEWALK SKETCHES.

ROMULUS.

(By Howard L. Ramm.)
Romulus was a half portion of a pair of Roman twins who discovered Rome when there wasn't anything there but blue sky and the corporate limits. The other twin was named Remus, but he was pretty faint and didn't seem to know whether he was going in or coming out.
Romulus and Remus were brought up by a she wolf, and never got out of the sixth grade. When they saw Rome sitting on her seven hills with her feet crossed and watched the lazy swing of the coruscated Italian mosquito as it skimmed the surface of the Tiber river, Romulus seized a pair of oxen in his bare hands and began to fence in all of the available town lots.
Rome did not look good to Remus, who had tried some of the drinking water and was not pleased with the results, so he asked Romulus why he didn't discover some place where they had a municipal waterworks plant. This was a simple question, uttered in jest, but it angered Romulus to such a degree of Fabrynet that he killed Remus with the neckyoke. This was the first bloodshed on Roma soil except that disseminated by the Tiberian mosquito, which is still disseminating.
Romulus gave his brother a first-class funeral with a spade, and then began to colonize Rome with office holders and other specimens of the hot polloi. He elected himself mayor, opened a saloon in defiance of the minor law and ran things with a high hand. It got so around Rome that nobody could get a circus license or an electric light franchise without lubricating Romulus in the region of the cash register.
Women were very scarce around Rome at this time, and one day Romulus invited a number of Sabine ladies over for a dance in the Woodman hall. Just when everybody seemed to be having a good time

BY THIS time we have done our best to acquaint every grocer in JANESVILLE with the great boon which Genuine Old Country Green Soap will be to you, his customers.

We've shown our grocer-friends how much "Old Country" will do for you—how it alone will replace all the "special" cleaning compounds—how it will wash anything from greasy crusted pots to the rarest laces—how it's so harmless that it is positively beneficial to your hands.

We've shown our grocer friends how much "Old Country" will save you—how its strength doubles the size of your cleaning dimes—how it saves its cost many times over in reducing your dyeing and dry-cleaning bills—how it adds to the life of your fabrics. And let us assure you, madam, that the best for your money is what your grocer wants to give you in every line.

And we've told the grocers something of "Old Country's" history—how it is the same identical green soft soap which has been the sole household cleaning staple in the old countries for over 150 years—why it has never been made in America because the formula has never been outside of one Old Country family—and how we brought over a member of that family to be our Chief Chemist.

The Three Guardsmen

... By ...
ALEXANDRE DUMAS

"That is I, that is I!" murmured the lady in extreme terror. "What do you want with me?"

"We want to judge you according to your crimes," said Athos. "You shall be free to defend yourself. Justify yourself if you can. M. D'Artagnan, it is for you to accuse her first."

"Before God and before men," said D'Artagnan, "I accuse this woman of having poisoned Constance Bonacieux."

"We bear witness to this," said Porthos and Aramis.

D'Artagnan continued: "Before God and before men I accuse this woman of having attempted to poison me in wine which she sent me from Villeroi, with a forged letter, as if that wine came from my friends. God preserved me, but a man named Brismont died in my place."

"We bear witness to this," said Porthos and Aramis.

"Before God and before men I accuse this woman of having urged me to murder the Baron de Wardes and of having employed assassins to shoot me, from whom I was again preserved by God's providence; but, as none can bear witness to these facts, I attest them myself. I have done."

"It is your turn, milord," said Athos. The baron came forward.

"Before God and before men," said he, "I accuse this woman of having been the means of the assassination of the Duke of Buckingham. That is not all. My brother, who bore of a strange disorder, which left vivid traces behind it all over the body. Assassin of Buckingham, assassin of Felton, assassin of my brother, I demand justice upon you, and I swear that if it be not granted to me I will execute it myself."

Milady let her head sink between her two hands and endeavored to recall her ideas, which whirled about in a mortal vertigo.

"It is my turn," said Athos. "I married that woman when she was a young girl. I married her in opposition to the wishes of all my family. I gave her my wealth. I gave her my name, and one day I discovered that this woman was branded. This woman was marked with a fleur-de-lis on her left shoulder."

"Oh," said D'Artagnan, "I defy you to find any tribunal which pronounced such an infamous sentence against me! I defy you to find him who executed it!"

"Silence!" cried a hollow voice. "It is for me to reply to that!" And the man in the red cloak came forward.

All eyes were turned toward this man, for to all except Athos he was unknown. And even Athos looked at him with as much stupefaction as the rest.

"The executioner of Lille! The executioner of Lille!" cried milady, a prey to wild terror. "Oh, pardon, pardon!" cried the miserable woman, falling on her knees.

All eyes were fixed upon the unknown, who said: "That woman was formerly a young maiden as beautiful as she is now. She was a nun in the convent of the Benedictines of Templemar. A young priest, of a simple and trustful heart, performed the duties of the church of that convent. She undertook his seduction and succeeded. She prevailed upon him to leave the country. But to leave the country money was necessary. The priest stole the sacred vessels and sold them. But they were both arrested."

"Within a week she seduced the son of the jailer and got away. The young priest was condemned to ten years of imprisonment and to be branded. I was executioner of the city of Lille, as this woman has said, and the guilty man, gentlemen, was my brother. I then swore that this woman who had ruined him should at least share his punishment. I followed her, I caught her and I impressed the same disgraceful mark upon her."

"The day after my return to Lille my brother in his turn succeeded in making his escape. I was accused of complicity and was condemned to remain in his place till he should be again a prisoner. My poor brother was ignorant of this sentence. He rejoined this woman. They fled together into Berry, and there he obtained a

They heard the hissing of the scimitar and the cry of the victim. Little outcry. This woman passed for his sister.

"The lord of the estate upon which the church of the curacy was situated saw this pretended sister and became enamored of her, so much so that he offered to marry her. Then she left him she had ruined for him she was destined to ruin and became the Countess de la Fere."

All eyes were turned toward Athos, whose real name that was and who made a sign with his hand that all was true that the executioner had said.

"Then," resumed he, "mad, desperate, my poor brother returned to Lille and, learning of my sentence, surrendered himself and hung himself from the iron bar of the loophole of his prison. I was set at liberty. That is the crime of which I accuse her; that is the cause of her being branded."

"M. d'Artagnan, Porthos, Aramis, de Winter," said Athos, "what is the penalty you demand against this woman?"

"The punishment of death," replied the four in stern, hollow voices.

At these words milady raised herself up to her full height and endeavored to speak, but her strength failed her. She felt that a powerful and implacable hand seized her by the hair and dragged her away.

Lord de Winter, D'Artagnan, Athos, Porthos and Aramis went out close behind her and the executioner. The lackers followed their masters.

Two of the lackers now led, or, rather, dragged, along milady by her arms. The executioner walked behind them, and Lord de Winter, D'Artagnan, Porthos and Aramis walked behind the executioner.

The two lackers led milady to the banks of the river. Being a few paces in advance, she perceived the lackers' eyes.

"A thousand piteous to each of you if you will assist my escape, but if you deliver me up to your masters I have near at hand avengers who will make you pay for my death very dearly."

Athos, who heard milady's voice, came sharply up. "Change these lackers," said he. "She has spoken to them. They are no longer safe."

When they arrived on the banks of the river the executioner approached milady and bound her hands and feet. Then she broke silence to cry out: "You are base cowards, miserable assassins, ten men combined to murder one woman! Beware! If I am not saved I shall be avenged!"

"You are not a woman," said Athos coldly and sternly. "You are a demon escaped from hell, to which place we are going to send you back again."

"He who shall touch a hair of my head is himself an assassin."

"The executioner can kill, madame, without being on that account an assassin," said the man in the red cloak, striking upon his immense sword. "This is the last judge."

He took her up in his arms and was carrying her toward the boat.

"Oh, my God," cried she, "my God, are you going to drown me?"

These cries had something heartrending in them. D'Artagnan was the youngest of all these men. His heart failed him. "Oh, I cannot behold this frightful spectacle!" said he. "I cannot consent that this woman should die thus!"

Milady heard these few words. "D'Artagnan, D'Artagnan," cried she, "remember that I loved you!"

Athos drew his sword and placed himself between them. "One step further, M. d'Artagnan," said he, "and, dear as I love you, we cross swords." He made a step toward milady.

"I pardon you," said he, "the ill you have done me. Die in peace!"

Lord de Winter advanced in his turn. "I pardon you," said he, "the poisoning of my brother, the assassination of his grace the Duke of Buckingham. I pardon you the death of poor Felton. I pardon you the attempts upon my own person. Die in peace."

"And I," said M. d'Artagnan, "pardon you, and I weep for you. Die in peace."

"I am lost!" murmured milady in English. "I must die!"

"The executioner placed her in the boat. The boat moved off toward the left hand shore of the Lys, bearing the guilty woman and the executioner. All the others remained on the right hand bank, where they fell on their knees.

The troop of friends saw the boat gain the opposite bank.

At length, during the passage, had contrived to untie the cord which fastened her feet. On coming near to the bank she jumped lightly on shore and took to flight.

But the soil was soft. On gaining the top of the bank she slipped and fell upon her knees.

Then they saw the executioner raise both his arms slowly. The two arms fell with a sudden force. They heard the hissing of the scimitar and the cry of the victim, then a truncated mass exhaled beneath the blow.

The executioner then took off his red cloak, spread it upon the ground, laid the body in it, threw in the head, tied all up with the four corners, lifted it on to his back and got into the boat again.

When arrived in the middle of the stream he stopped the boat and suspending the burden over the water: "Let the justice of God be done!" cried he with a loud voice.

And he let the body drop into the depths of the waters, which closed over it.

Within three days the four musketeers were in Paris.

CHAPTER XLVI. Conclusion.

ON the 6th of the following month the king, in compliance with a promise he had made the cardinal to return to La Rochelle, left his capital still in amazement at the news which began to spread of Buckingham's assassination.

The return to La Rochelle was particularly dull. Our four friends in particular astonished their comrades; they traveled together, side by side, with spiritless eyes and heads depressed.

One day, when the king had bailed to hunt and the four friends had stopped at an inn on the high road, a man coming from La Rochelle on horseback pulled up at the door to drink a glass of wine.

"Hilloa, M. d'Artagnan!" said he. "Is not that you I see yonder?"

D'Artagnan raised his head and uttered a cry of joy. It was his unknown of Meung.

D'Artagnan drew his sword and sprang toward the door. But this time, instead of avoiding him, the unknown jumped from his horse and advanced to meet D'Artagnan.

"In the name of the king, I arrest you!" he said.

"How? What do you say?" cried D'Artagnan.

"I am the Chevalier de Rochefort, the equerry of Mgr. the Cardinal de Richelieu, and I have orders to conduct you to his eminence."

"We are returning to his eminence, M. le Chevalier," said Athos, advancing. "And you will please to accept the word of M. d'Artagnan that he will go straight to La Rochelle. We will be his guards, monsieur, upon our words as gentlemen."

"Gentlemen," said Rochefort, "if M. d'Artagnan will surrender his sword to me and join his word to yours, I will be satisfied with your promise to convey M. d'Artagnan to the quarters of Mgr. the Cardinal. I wish to continue my journey."

"If it is for the purpose of rejoining milady," said Athos coolly, "it is useless; you will not find her."

"What is become of her, then?" asked Rochefort eagerly.

"Come back with us to the camp and you shall know."

They were only a day's journey from Surges, to which place the cardinal was to come to meet the king. They resumed their route.

On the morrow at 3 o'clock in the afternoon they arrived at Surges. The cardinal here greeted Louis XIII. On returning in the evening to his quarters at the bridge of La Pierre the cardinal found D'Artagnan, without his sword, and the three musketeers, armed, standing before the door of the house. He made a sign with his eye and hand for D'Artagnan to follow him.

D'Artagnan obeyed.

"We shall wait for you, D'Artagnan," said Athos loud enough for the cardinal to hear him.

Pursued by an Apparition.

That burglars have a keen sense of humor has often been demonstrated, and a merry thief turned up at Chicago the other day who, running unexpectantly into a policeman, explained that he was seeking for police protection. The apparition in question turned out to be a night-shirted householder whose home the fugitive had just robbed!

Observe an Ancient Custom.

The ancient custom of holding a service on the beach to ask God's blessing on the labors of the fishermen was observed the other day at Selsey, the quaint little Sussex (Eng.) fishing village.

Age of Niagara Falls.

To the question: "How old are the Niagara falls?" geologists have returned replies varying by tens of thousands of years. At first it was estimated that the Niagara river came into existence through changes in the level of the land around the great lakes about 55,000 years ago. Later this was reduced to only 12,000 years. Lyell increased the estimate again to 3,600 years, and still later other scientists lowered it to about 9,000 years.

The Hen:—"I made the mistake of my life when I opened up in this town."

IF THIS IS YOUR BIRTHDAY
Good fortune will be yours and some of your dearest hopes will be fulfilled. You will meet new friends which you will value highly.

Those born today will have the faults common to this month, which are selfishness and insincerity, but their higher intelligence will cause them to overcome these.

Going Slow.
"Some new potatoes today?" inquired the grocer with a sugary smile. "I don't know," responded the young housewife. "The old kind have been quite satisfactory. How do these new potatoes differ from the old brands? If they are really an improvement, I might try some."

FORTY YEARS AGO

Janesville Gazette, Aug. 9, 1872.—The Main Street Drive.—The recent repairs on South Main street and the sprinkler by the public spirited residents of that thoroughfare render it one of the most delightful drives to be found in this vicinity. Every evening it is crowded with vehicles and fleet horses the level mile stretch, the bowers of shade which fringe its entire length and the absence of dust giving it an attractiveness which few pleasure seekers can resist when they drive out, after the heat of the day, for their evening recreation. The fast stock of Janesville may be seen there every pleasant night. Mrs. Judd and Burbank like to stretch their Magna Charta coils over the level course; Dave Watt feels an exhilaration in the lively movements of his little bay; B. B. Eldridge enjoys the majestic grace of his glossy beauty; Marshall don't care much what comes along, his family horse Dexter keeps his nose ahead unless McKinney happens to work alongside and then there is lively sport. There are many others—we can't recall them just now but the aggregate tonnage of good horseflesh on Main is an interesting locality.

The Gun Captured.—For a week or more past officer McDougall has been more than half certain that he knew where the Janesville light artillery was stationed. So he took the afternoon train for Clinton Junction, and guided by instinct, walked into the stable where the gun was hoisted, attached it to a pair of horses and drew it to the depot, where he made arrangements with the Northwestern Co. to ship it to Janesville. The gun was borrowed by the Clintonites some three or four years ago and has been there ever since. It arrived here yesterday and will be heard in honor of North Carolina on Saturday.

Brief Items.—Rock River is several degrees below low, water mark.
The Doty Mill works hoisted a Grant and Wilson flag last night.
The east side fire steamer was employed last night to clean out the sewer under Main street. A stream of water was forced through one of the sewer openings and the foul accumulations within it were washed into the river.

Must Pay Fee for Dancing.
Any person past the age of sixteen years who wishes to dance at Dodge City must pay the city $1 a year. The city commissioners met not long ago and passed an ordinance providing for a license fee of $1 from all dancers, and further providing that no person under the age of sixteen can attend a dance unless accompanied by a parent or guardian.—Kansas City Journal.

Make One Heart Happy.
If each one worked upon the maxim day by day, "strive to make one heart happy," jealousy, revenge, hate, with their kindred evil associates, would forever leave the earth. Our minds would be so occupied in the contemplation of adding to the pleasures of others that there would be no room for discord.—Richter.

PUBLIC IS ASKED TO AID IN THE MATTER

Persons Answering Fraudulent Advertisements Asked to Notify Gazette.
The Gazette is desirous of keeping out of its columns fraudulent advertising and asks the assistance of its patrons to that end.
There are any number of concerns in the country who make a living through a nicely worded advertisement, offering golden opportunities, and these unscrupulous people find fertile ground for work among the masses.
Many orders are received in the Gazette mail for advertising which are returned as objectionable and where there is a question as to the qualifications the advertisement is omitted. All newspapers have this experience.
But even with the utmost care there will be an occasional advertisement which will pass the scrutiny of the business department of the paper and find its way into the columns.
The Gazette will deem it a favor if you will report to the office any trouble which may have been experienced through the answering of such an advertisement.

DIET AND HEALTH HINTS

By DR. T. J. ALLEN Food Specialist

PASTEURIZING MILK AT HOME.
At the recent meeting of the American Society for the Prevention of Infant Mortality, Dr. George W. Goler said that Pasteurization is not usually done to prevent disease, but to prevent the milk from souring, and that people should be taught to Pasteurize their milk at home.
The milk should be obtained as fresh as possible. The albumen of milk coagulates at a temperature of 160° and is then less easily assimilated. An infant cannot live on boiled milk. Even boiling temperature does not destroy all injurious germs found in the ordinary cow's milk, but many are destroyed at a temperature of 155. If the milk is kept at that temperature from ten to twenty minutes and then quickly reduced to freezing and kept below 50 till required for use. This can be done by setting the milk bottle in a pan of water at a temperature of 160, immediately on its delivery; by the time the bottle and contents have been raised to 155 the water will have cooled five degrees and should be renewed at 155. After keeping the temperature up to 155 for fifteen or twenty minutes, place the bottle at once in the refrigerator till needed, when it should be heated to 95.

Weather Instinct of Animals.

All animals have a weather instinct. The approach of rain is indicated by the flight of swallows, by the cries of water fowl and by the actions of cows and pigs.
